

LEGAL ANNOUNCEMENT

The civil air transportation authorities of each member states of the European Union may check only the aircrafts of the airlines that provide flights to and from the airports of the European Union; and due to random nature of such checks, it is not possible to check each aircraft that lands at each European Union airport. The fact that the airline is not indicated on the list of the Association does not automatically mean that such company complies with the respective safety standards.

If the company that is currently indicated on the list of the Association assumes that it complies with the necessary technical standards and requirements indicated in the respective international safety standards, it might request the Committee to initiate the proceedings to withdraw it from the list.

All possible effort was made to verify the exact identity of all airlines indicated on the list of the Association – particularly with regard to the following properties: specific (and unique) letter codes for each airline by the ICAO organisation of the country that has issued the certificate as well as the certificate numbers (or the operating licence) of the air transport operator. Nevertheless, the complete verification was not in all cases possible due to the general lack of information on some airlines that could be borderline with the respected international system of the air transportation or entirely inconsistent with it. For this reason we cannot exclude the fact that there might be companies that conduct their business activities in good faith under the same business name as some of the airlines indicated in the list of the Association.
